Describes Epic Battle to Hold Bataan

WRITER TELLS OF 98-DAYS' GRIM DEFENSE

American-Filipino Troops Fought 15 Days and 15 Nights Without Rest.

CORREGIDOR STANDS

Correspondent Gives Details Of Last Tragic Hours Before 'White Flag.'

By FRANK HEWLETT
(UP Staff Correspondent)

CORREGIDOR FORTRESS, Manila Bay, April 9—(Delayed)—The gallant United States and Philippine forces in the Bataan peninsula surrendered today after enduring the tortures of hell for 98 days.

Hungry, fever-ridden, exhausted, they crumbled after a blazing final stand of 15 days and 15 nights without surcease against thousands upon thousands of fresh Japanese shock troops pick of the mikado's armies, under the constant bombardment of guns and screaming dive bombers which came down on them in scores.

They were beaten but it was a fight that ought to make every American bow his head in tribute. It was America's Bataan that had fallen but it should live forever in American history.

Corregidor still stands and it is ready to take it.

Already, as I write this dispatch, the Japanese have started a furious long range gun bombardment on it from the Bataan coast.

Throughout last night and this morning, tired and haggard troops had been arriving here, four miles out in the bay from the Bataan peninsula in a steady stream.

One engineer corps boat commanded by Lieut James Seater, Anchorage, Alaska, made four trips.

When the white flag was raised on Bataan this morning the evacuation suddenly stopped.

The navy also worked heroically in handling the evacuation of personnel and equipment from Mariveles, where the last bitter stand of the broken army was made. It is the last town on the peninsula, at its very tip.

Navy boats throughout the day have been picking up from the bay the dauntless men, who, to continue the fight, came swimming out to this fortress.

The army's radio "the voice of

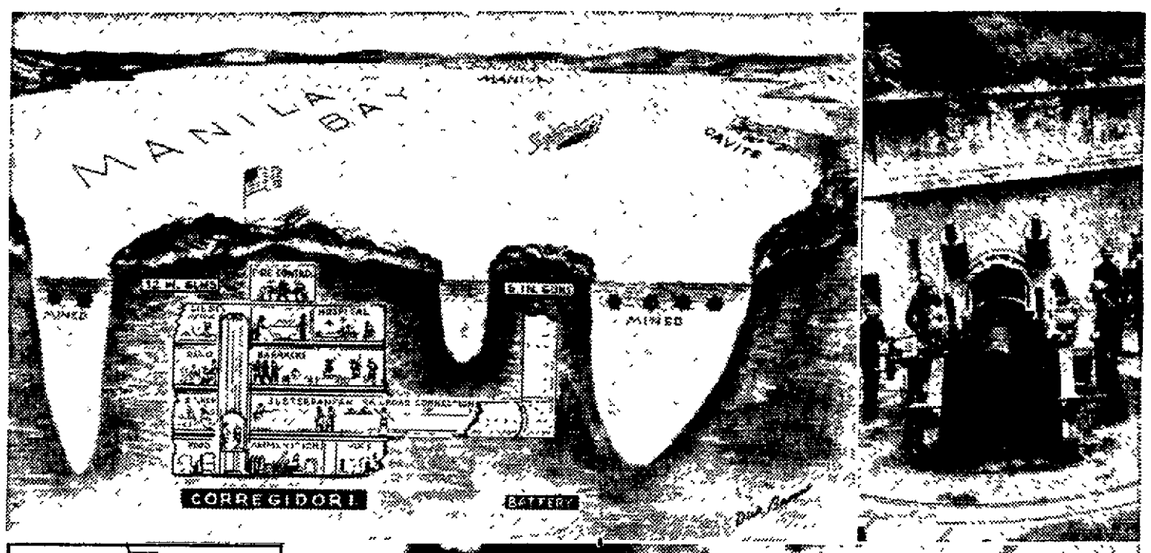
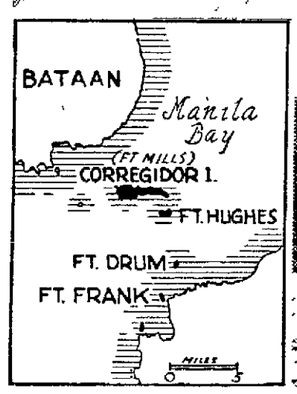
Manila Bay Forts That Still Bark Defiance at Japs on Luzon





American-Filipino hopes of maintaining a strong foothold in the Philippines lie principally on the defiant big guns and anti-aircraft batteries of the four island fortresses at the mouth of Manila bay, where the American garrisons still hold out. The four forts, Hughes, Frank, Drum and Mills, are indicated on the map, lower left. Most powerful of the four is Fort Mills on rocky Corregidor island. An artist's conception of the stronghold is shown, upper left, and one of the 12-inch mortars on the island is pictured, upper right. The other three islands also have powerful defenses, like Battery Marshall, lower right, at Fort Hughes.

ARRANGE 3 BIG SEND-OFFS FOR NEW DRAFTEES

Civic Committee Members to Sponsor Separate Public Demonstrations.

LEAVE LATE IN APRIL

Sponsoring Group Picks Name Of Richland Victory Civic Committee In Contest.

The Richland Victory Civic Committee, which until it changed its name last night was the Soldiers-Citizens committee, announced plans today for continuing the community send-off demonstrations which were inaugurated with the departure of the last group of draftees March 24.

A separate send-off will be arranged for the next group from each of the three Richland county draft boards, which will leave on successive days late this month for army induction centers, Chairman Earl Saltzgaber of the committee announced.

Different arrangements are being worked out for handling traffic and parking of buses to prevent the confusion which developed at the March 24 send-off, when a surprising crowd of more than 5,000 jammed downtown streets, Saltzgaber said.

The chairman also announced that the regular "going-away" party for the new group of selectees will be held at the Legion Home on the evening of Tuesday, April 20. These parties are given for all men of the county entering various branches of the service and for their girl friends. A program of entertainment is presented, a lunch served, and music for dancing is provided by an orchestra. The committee's gift to each serviceman also is presented at this time.

The committee's new name, selected by a judging committee made up of Grattan Johnson, Walter Beckley, Mrs. Florence Blunk, and Miss Sylvia Frankel, was suggested by Mrs Laura Meily, 139 Pleasant avenue She will be presented a $5 war stamp purchased from personal contributions of committee members, at the April 20 party.

Others who won two tickets to the Madison theater for their suggested names for the committee are W. B. Palmer, 793 Park avenue west; Mrs. Robert Schuster, Ontario; Mrs. Earl Briggs, R. D. 4; Carol E. Sturgeon, 256 South Adams; Mrs. Barbara E. Sturg-

Japanese Land 12,000 Troops On Cebu Island

Tiny Band of U. S., Filipino Defenders Exact Heavy Casualties; Bombardment Of Corregidor Goes on Steadily; Garrison In Fierce Resistance.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Two medium sized United States merchant vessels have been torpedoed off the Atlantic coast, the navy announced today. No details were given.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—With the bombardment of Corregidor being relentlessly pursued, the battle of Cebu was launched on a full scale today when a Japanese invasion force of 12,000 troops supported by tanks landed on the island despite heavy casualties inflicted by the tiny little band of American-Filipino defenders.

Disclosure of the invasion of Cebu was made in a war department communique which stated that the landing force was backed up by enemy dive-bombers and a heavy barrage laid down by Jap naval vessels off the island.

Lieutenant General Jonathan M. Wainwright reported that Corregidor, from where he directs the battle, and Fort Hughes—both in the Manila bay area—were subjected to fierce artillery cross-fire and heavy air attacks.

Little damage was reported, however, on Corregidor and the other American-held forts in Manila bay, on which Wainwright's forces are making a final stand against the Japanese following the fall of Bataan.

On Cebu, the war department reported that the defenders "continue to resist stubbornly" and that enemy casualties have been "heavy."

"Despite fierce resistance by the small American and Philippine force, the enemy was able to effect a landing on the island of Cebu on April 10," the communique stated.

"The Japanese force now debarking on that island is estimated at 12,000. The landing is being supported by dive bombers and a

COUNTY FLOOD THREAT FADES

More Snow Forecast Along With Temperature Drop; Some Cities Hit.

April, which so far has proved as changeable as March, produced a wintry storm today that covered the Mansfield area with a half-inch of snow.

Although the snow discouraged gardeners and threatened flowers and fruit buds, it halted the rise of flood waters which have damaged culverts on Richland county roads and spread over highways and thousands of acres of land in other parts of the state.

While the flood threat in this area apparently was over today, the weather outlook was not very promising. The weatherman said there would be more snow this afternoon and the temperature may drop considerably below freezing tonight. It was 30 this morning and 32 at noon.

Creeks in Richland county continued to fall today, but the county engineer's office reported that a number of small culverts on county roads were damaged by the high waters of the past two days. There was no water on county or state routes in the Mansfield area today.

Conduct Memorial Service Tomorrow For Lieut. Spreng

Memorial services for Mansfield's first victim of World War II, Second Lieut. Robert P. Spreng, 28-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Spreng, 414 Park avenue west, will be conducted at 2 p. m. tomorrow at St. Luke's Lutheran church.

Members of the Mansfield Kiwanis club will meet in front of the church at 1:45 p. m. to attend the services in a body. Lieut. Spreng was a member of the club, as is his father.

Rev. H. S. Garnes, pastor of St. Luke's, will officiate at the Memorial services. Prayers of the church and Scriptures will be read, and a solo, "The Twenty-Third Psalm," will be presented.

Lieut. Spreng was one of two fliers from Richland county killed April 2 in an airplane accident in "the far eastern theater of war." The other was Capt. Elmer L. Parsel, 36, whose father resides near Plymouth. Neither family has received the letter which the war department stated would be sent shortly, apparently, to provide additional details of the accident.

U. S. Set for All-Out Price, Wage Controls

Orders Expected to Be Issued Within Next Two Weeks by FDR as New Attack on Inflation.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The Roosevelt administration is about to junk its present system of selective price control in favor of overall ceilings on prices and wages as part of a four-point attack on inflation, it was learned on most reliable authority today.

Two executive orders, one freezing retail prices and another dealing with wages, salaries and bonuses, have been prepared. They are expected to be issued in a week or two.

The program, devised to meet an inflationary situation described as "explosive" by Price Administrator Leon Henderson last week, was shaped up at a White House conference yesterday. Besides Henderson, those attending were Vice President Henry A. Wallace, Budget Director Harold D. Smith, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Marriner S. Eccles and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr.

The program still is subject to revision, but at this stage it is understood to embrace:

1. Increased taxes — much in excess of the $7,600,000,000 program for which President Roosevelt asked in his January budget message. Part of the taxes may be in the form of compulsory savings for individuals and corporations.

2. Universal price control, in-

DESERTER HELD

Soldier Tells Police He Made Two Escapes.

Captured for the second time since he deserted his post at Camp Croft, S. C., on April 1, a 22-year-old soldier was in Mansfield city jail today awaiting the arrival of army authorities from Fort Hayes, Columbus.

The soldier, William Grillo, told Emil Lommatzsch, Erie railroad detective, who apprehended him last night, that he had been captured the first time in Kentucky and then while being returned from Columbus to Camp Croft he had overpowered his guard and escaped earlier this week.

Grillo, according to the detective, got the keys to his handcuffs but of a guard's pocket and escaped from a tram.

The youth was picked up by Lommatzsch last night in the Erie railroad yards after he had broken windows in a yardhouse. Grillo told the detective he broke the windows to get into a "warm place to sleep."

ORGANIZE 3-MAN SABOTAGE UNIT

Mansfield Police Forming Special Department For Duration of War.

Moving to provide a unit to investigate possible acts of sabotage in Mansfield, city officials today were preparing to name three first-class patrolmen to wartime duties for the duration of the war.

Police Chief Thomas M. Bell said that two patrolmen would be appointed to "full-time" sabotage duty and another patrolman would be designated as an assistant to Ernest C. Fuller, identification officer, to help with the overflow of requests for the identification of workers in war production plants.

Chief Bell said he was requesting City Solicitor L. K. Wagner to define whether Mayor W. J. Locke and Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolfe or he (Bell) had the power to appoint the patrolmen.

Wagner said he believed that the mayor and service director were authorized to make the appointments but that Chief Bell would delegate the new appointees duties.

City council appropriated funds for the special wartime appointpointments Tuesday night when it passed a new salary ordinance. Included in the ordinance were provisions to pay two first-class patrolmen $185 monthly for sabotage duty and another first-class patrolman $165 for acting as assistant identification officer. The first-class patrolmen are usually paid $160 per month.

Hubbell frequently has sought public office with little success.

COLLAPSE: India Parley Ends As Cripps Withdraws Proposal

BULLETIN

NEW DELHI—(Via Radio)—(U.P.)—Sir Stafford Cripps, in a radio broadcast, today blamed India's "critical and unconstructive attitude" for the collapse of independence negotiations and warned the Indians that "only misery and starvation" would result from Japanese occupation of any part of India.

(By United Press)

NEW DELHI—Sir Stafford Cripps today withdrew Britain's offer to grant India dominion status after the war and announced that he would leave for home tomorrow.

Thus Britain's crucial negotiations with Indian leaders looking toward an all-out Indian participation in the war, ended in complete collapse.

Cripps pledged Great Britain to do its utmost to defend India and appealed to Indians to defend their land against aggression to the last.

Cripps announced the offer had been withdrawn at a press conference following a formal statement admitting flatly that negotiations had "failed."

British quarters bitterly blamed leaders of the Nationalist All-India congress for the failure at a moment when Indian cities were being bombed and the country was threatened by invasion.

Cripps in a formal statement marking the end of his attempts, with the aid of President Roosevelt's special envoy Louis A. Johnson, to reach an agreement on Indian defense, said he had received a reply from the working or executive committee of the Nationalist congress.

Pledging Britain to a finish fight to defend India, he called on Indians for "a total effort in every field of activity in defending their soil."

Cripps said that now the position reverted approximately to that which obtained before he came to India, but he added, in an implied hope for co-operation: "Though perhaps not quite the same position."

CAPPED: British Top Night Raids With Coastal Bombings

BULLETIN

KUIBYSHEV, Russia—(U.P.)—Heavy German reinforcements were reported rushing by train from occupied Europe to the Russian front today, but the Red army continued its pounding thrusts into the central and northern fronts and further relieved the siege of Leningrad.

(By Associated Press)

Waves of RAF planes blasted the German-occupied "invasion coast" of France today, capping heavy night assaults in which British raiders dropped hundreds of tons of high explosives and incendiaries on Germany's Ruhr valley war foundries in one of the fiercest attacks of the war.

The big Krupp armament works was the chief target of the night foray, the London air ministry said, acknowledging the loss of 13 RAF bombers.

German-occupied Le Havre also was bombed.

The Germans said 12 British bombers were shot down and acknowledged that "houses were damaged and there were casualties among the civilian population."

RAF daylight raiders apparently struck in the direction of Boulogne.

Coincidentally, the London Daily Sketch hinted at an Allied invasion of the continent, declaring that conferences of Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. army chief of staff, and Harry Hopkins with Britain's war leaders indicated that "our plans have gone beyond the production stage."

"The contemplated stroke may be of an unexpected character and at an unexpected place," the newspaper said. "There is plenty of room for striking at Nazi-occupied Europe."

British officials were said to have estimated that Adolf Hitler had about 600,000 troops for defense against such an invasion, and that Allied landing armies would have to be about two and one-half times as strong.

On the Russian front, Soviet dispatches reported that more than 3,000 Germans had been killed in

GEN. JOHNSON:

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—In this town of rumors one of the latest and most discussed is the proposal of the navy to take over the merchant marine. I doubt if this scheme would work.

In the first place, the navy has chartered several merchant marine vessels, and, to date, has not yet seen fit to man them with navy personnel — presumably because of lack of manpower.

Gen. Johnson.

Second, the navy has enough to do to take care of our military and convoy needs all over the globe.

Third, navy training has not been along the lines of securing the greatest utilization of manpower from a small body of men.

The reasons which have impelled this latest development have been the numerous instances of lack of discipline in the merchant marine. Stories have come to me of ships missing convoys because of drunkenness among members of the crew, thus leaving the vessel short-handed and unable to sail.

It is no isolated occasion when an unlicensed man actually strikes or threatens to strike his superior officer on board ship, and instances where men are unable to stand watch because of drunkenness or other intemperate acts are altogether too numerous.

The various state directors of the selective service system have been advised that because of the danger of their calling and the necessity for ship operation, personnel in the merchant marine may well be considered as serving in the armed forces.

Under these conditions merchant seamen should be subject to stringent discipline. Ship jumpers, ship missers and drunkards should be removed from the merchant marine and immediately reclassified by their selective service boards for instant service with the armed forces.

This writer feels that the majority of our seamen are patriotic, energetic Americans who desire to do their utmost in these times of emergency, but they are hampered by this lousy, undisciplined fringe — which amounts to a small percentage —who are undoing all the good that has been accomplished by the loyal personnel going to sea.

The unions and the leaders of the various seafaring unions are not without blame. In too many instances they have failed to submit their members to discipline by officers for these acts, and, in addition, have refused to permit disciplinary measures by others, including the government.

Licensed officers have been voted off ships by unlicensed members of the crew, and the ship-owners have been too reluctant or too concerned for profits properly to back up their licensed officers in their efforts to restore and maintain discipline.

Pious platitudes and lip service of union leaders in these matters must give way to a dominant, aggressive and positive stand.

They must see to it that such members of their unions (and the industry is almost 100 per cent organized) are properly subject to discipline and, if necessary, are removed, not only from the ship upon which these acts take place, but from all ships, so that their presence on board will not invite disaster.

A missed convoy, a delay in sailing, may well be the difference between victory and defeat.

SEE REQUEST FOR FURTHER FEDERAL TAXES

House Committee Members Say Move Would Make Sales Levy Certainty.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — House ways and means committee members said today that any administration request for an increase in its seven billion dollar tax program would make some form of a sales tax certain.

Discussing reports that President Roosevelt might revise sharply upward his tax request as a means to help control inflation, the committeemen said that in that case some kind of consumer tax—already endorsed by a majority—could not be avoided.

Secretary Morgenthau said recently he was standing by his request for $7,610,000,000 more revenue, "until there is a public announcement by the president" of a change in the estimate.

"Any increase would make a sales tax inevitable," said Rep. Knutson (R-Minn).

Most of the committeemen had said that in no event could congress take more than $3,660,000,000 additional from individuals and an equal amount from corporations. These two proposals formed the basis for Morgenthau's program presented to congress March 3.

Chairman Doughton (D-NC) has expressed preference for a manufacturers sales tax, if any such levy were to be made. Some sentiment has developed, too, for a 1 percent transactions tax, imposed on all monthly transactions in excess of $1,000.

The committee plans to close hearings on the entire Morgenthau program next week and begin closed-door deliberations the following week. There appeared to be little possibility that the new tax bill could be ready for the house before the middle of May.

IOWA SENATOR WANTS STRUCK PLANTS SEIZED

Members of Senate See Spur To 'Tough' Labor Laws In Grave War News.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Sen. Clyde Herring (D) Iowa today proposed that strikers in war plants be shorn of draft deferments while other senators predicted that the grave turn in the war will spur enactment of "tough" labor legislation by congress.

Herring is expected to propose his plan to the senate when consideration of the Connally bill, calling for seizure of strike-bound plants, provides a vehicle for a free-for-all fight over labor legislation. The Connally bill comes up for consideration April 20.

Indicating a change of attitude in the senate, Herring said that there is a "good chance" that the labor committee will report out his comprehensive bill for consideration along with the Connally bill.

Herring's measure provides for a "cooling off" period before strikes, mediation machinery, freezes open and closed shop conditions, and penalize labor leaders who encourage strikes.

"I would add to it a provision that anyone who does strike shall be deprived of his deferment under the draft and that he be prohibited from working in a defense plant for a year," said Herring. "This is not a 'work or fight' plan necessarily, but recognizes that everyone has an obligation.

"I expect to see the 40-hour week go, and a 48-hour week without overtime adopted. It would be a fine thing if labor would accept the 48-hour week. Labor is patriotic."

Meantime, Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D) Va., in a speech in Baltimore, demanded immediate steps to cut non-defense expenditures $2,000,000,000, elimination of 'boondoggling' and speeding of war production.

"Even our humiliating defeat at Pearl Harbor and the defeats that followed have not changed basically some of our policies," said Byrd. "We still stick to the 40-hour week, in the face of an overwhelming public demand for its repeal. Only recently the country was shocked to be told by Mr. Donald Nelson that we are operating on only a 50 percent war production basis.

For instance, I think Hedy Lamarr would run her own scientific research laboratory; she has had her military inventions seriously considered by the government in Washington, and is as scientific as she is beautiful. Greer Garson can take shorthand and type with great speed, so she'd probably do extremely well as an efficient—if distracting—emanuensis. Ann Rutherford would be an interior decorator, I'm sure, because she can trim a lamp and upholster a chair like an expert.

Laraine Day? She'd run a little theater as actress-writer-manager-director. Lana Turner would be an ace dress designer—she uses her own designs now for many of her most effective costumes. Ann Sothern would be a crack salesman and real estate operator; even if at the moment she owns some extremely successful oil wells. And Myrna Loy could be a rare herb farmer and "rake in" money. She does it now for fun.

ARMY APPROVES PAY RAISE BILL

Endorsement Makes Passage Certain; Would Increase Base Rate to $42.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Rep. Andrew May (D., Ky.), chairman of the house military affairs committee, today disclosed that the war department has endorsed the sweeping army pay raise bill making speedy enactment of the measure a certainty.

May said his group will start hearings next Tuesday on the senate-approved bill which increases privates' pay from $21 and $30 to $42 a month, with similar raises for other ranks up to and including second lieutenants. May predicted final passage by the end of the week.

At the same time the Kentuckian said that the committee also will consider—"and undoubtedly approve"—the so-called compulsory allotment bill which, by permitting deductions from a soldier's pay for those he leaves behind, will open the way for possible induction of millions of men now deferred because of dependents.

Going hand in hand with these matters also is a bill to provide free laundry, cleaning and haircuts to soldiers, which would have the effect of adding another $5 a month to what they receive.

"We will take up the pay raise matter first," May declared. "The war department says now that they are for it, if we can get approval of the budget bureau."

The chairman said the committee probably will consider the compulsory allotment matter in connection with the pay raise bill and bring the two out as one piece of legislation.

Blank Shortage Delays Rationing Of Typewriters

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Typewriter rationing — scheduled to begin Monday throughout the nation—will be delayed in Ohio for several days because a shortage of inventory blanks made it impossible for dealers to report stocks on hand.

H. T. Beckman, state rationing administrator, said Ohio's 600 local boards may have to wait a week before they begin allocation of typewriters.

New and used typewriters of all kinds will be rationed, but new portable and all used typewriters may be rented, he asserted. The ban on rental of new non-portable machines will remain in effect, however.

Beckmann declared some boards have been "misled by erroneous statements" issued at unauthorized meetings on rationing regulations. He ordered board members not to attend such trade association sessions in the future.

JAPANESE LAND 12,000 TROOPS ON CEBU ISLAND

Make Invasion Thrust Despite Heavy Casualties, Blast At Corregidor.

heavy fire from hostile naval vessels. Tank units have been landed by the Japanese."

It was evident that the landing force was the invasion armada of five warships and 10 transports which Wainwright reported off Cebu yesterday. At that time, he advised the war department that one of the fleet of American torpedo boats defending the island had sunk a Japanese cruiser.

Meanwhile, the garrisons on Corregidor and Fort Hughes, bolstered by nearly 3,500 marines and bluejackets who escaped from Bataan, fiercely resisted the renewed enemy onslaughts.

"Corregidor and Fort Hughes in Manila bay were subjected to intensive air attacks during the past 24 hours," the communique said. "However, our casualties were few and the damage inflicted was slight."

The artillery cross fire came from Nipponese batteries on Bataan, north of Corregidor, and from the south shore of Manila bay.

Wainwright also reported that he still has been unable to communicate with any of the 36,800 American-Filipino troops who were trapped on Bataan when the peninsula's defenses were overwhelmed by the superior enemy forces.

Text of the war department's 185th communique follows:

"PHILIPPINE THEATER—Despite fierce resistance by the small American and Philippine force, the enemy was able to effect a landing on the island of Cebu on April 10.

"The Japanese force now debarking on that island is estimated at 12,000. The landing is being supported by dive bombers and a heavy fire from hostile naval vessels. Tank units have been landed by the Japanese.

"The defenders continue to resist stubbornly and the invaders have been unable to advance inland more than a few miles at any point. Enemy casualties have been heavy.

"There is no communication between our troops in Bataan and those on Corregidor.

"There is nothing to report from other areas."

Disclosure by the navy that 1,500 marines and the majority of 2,000 sailors were transported to Corregidor when the collapse of Bataan became inevitable indicated that Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright is determined to resist the Japanese in the Manila bay area as long as possible.

The task of full-scale resistance on Corregidor has been complicated temporarily by the fact that Wainwright ordered the guns which are trained on Bataan peninsula to withhold their fire for fear of blasting some of the 36,800 American-Filipino troops trapped there.

Except for conflicting Japanese and Axis radio reports, nothing has been heard from the valiant Bataan defenders since they reported that the numerically superior Nipponese forces had succeeded in outflanking their defense positions.

In Washington, army spokesmen said they had received no reports tending to confirm a Tokyo broadcast that American Filipino troops still are resisting on Bataan. Another Japanese report asserted that enemy commanders have been conferring with American officers.

That the Japanese dominate the entire peninsula was indicated by an army communique which stated that enemy artillery batteries have been shelling Corregidor from Bataan. Hitherto, only siege guns on the Cavite short have shelled the island ports.

Further proof that United States forces in the far Pacific have no intention of relaxing their efforts to crush the invaders came with the disclosure that American naval vessels have sunk two more Japanese warships.

Wainwright reported the first successful attack following sinking of an enemy cruiser by torpedo boats in a surprise raid on a Japanese invasion armada off the Philippine island of Cebu.

Later the navy stated that one of its submarines sunk a large, heavily-armed enemy ship in the Celebes sea in the southwest Pacific. The ship was believed to have been either an auxiliary cruiser or a large tender.

Military experts declined to speculate on how long Corregidor might be able to hold out in the face of Nipponese supremacy in that area and the fact that the enemy controls the skies and sealanes, making the task of sending reinforcements virtually a hopeless one.

The fact that the garrison, along with the Bataan defenders, went on short rations months ago, indicates that food supplies may be running low.

Empowered by President Roosevelt to continue or cease resistance in the Manila area, Wainwright, however, appears determined to hold on as long as possible. This is the interpretation Washington put on his message:

"Our flag still flies over the beleaguered island fortress of Corregidor."

Asserts Philippines Will Fight On

MELBOURNE — (INS) — While American and Australian fliers inflict punishing blows against Japanese bases in the southwest Pacific, Manuel Quezon, president of the exiled Philippines government, declared today that the fall of Bataan peninsula had not ended the war in his native islands.

The organization had sought a new name because its work applies equally to young men entering the navy, marine corps, or coast guard, as well as army service, and the name "Soldiers-Citizens Committee" had led to a belief that it was concerned only with army men.

A committee headed by James Brownscombe, which prepared the organization's float in the Army Day parade, presented a report at last night's meeting. The group then sent a letter of thanks to the Manufacturers club for paying the cost of the float.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 1942.

Drive carefully tomorrow—but don't take it for granted that everyone else will be that sensible.

The mere fact that a man can't find anything else to do shouldn't entitle him to a public office.

Nature note reveals that "alligators are quite harmless if their mouths are kept shut"—and this may also apply to some people you know.

Community Chest's Spring Call

THE COMMUNITY FUND CAMPAIGN, scheduled to start Monday, has a goal of $25,000, designed to carry through the work of the participating agencies until November 1, instead of the larger amount budgeted for an entire year, as in the past.

This plan is being followed so that hereafter Mansfield's annual Community Fund campaign can be conducted in the fall, instead of in the spring, as has been done since start of the Community Chest idea in this city more than twenty years ago.

It has become an almost universal practice of cities over the country to concentrate these campaigns in a brief fall period, during which all have the advantage of national publicity and more general interest.

The record of the Community Chest in Mansfield has been so satisfactory, and the work of affiliated agencies is so well known and so highly appreciated, that little need be said of the community advantages gained through adequate financial support of this civic project.

While there are many present calls for contributions, and a variety of obligations to be met, it is also true that many people are earning more than they ordinarily do and that they can join in support of the Community Chest without inconvenience.

Whatever unusual calls may come as a result of war, it is quite apparent that none of the essential services performed in this city by agencies supported in whole or in part by the Community Fund can be safely suspended, postponed or diminished—in fact some of them may be even more indispensable now than in peace time.

Those who will be actively engaged in the fund-raising campaign starting Monday have many calls upon their time and an expression of appreciation of their work can best be given by shortening this task as much as possible—so that the $25,000 goal can be reached quickly.

Senatorial District Unchanged

NOT THAT it is unimportant, but because it has been such a confused political mess, few people have taken the trouble to acquaint themselves with the fooling around that has been going on in connection with attempted revision of state senatorial districts.

Except that Richland county has been in "the 27-29 joint senatorial district," with Ashland, Medina and Lorain counties as associates, and with usually one but occasionally two senators, seldom acquainted in this part of the district, little attention has been given this responsible legislative position.

The attempted gerrymander, which has been ruled unconstitutional by the state supreme court, would have placed Richland county in the 29-31 joint senatorial district, with Ashland, Crawford, Wyandot and Seneca counties and would have turned the district's political complexion from Republican to Democratic.

While politics may have inspired the re-districting set-up, and politics may have also motivated the opposition which carried the case to the supreme court, the public reaction toward this whole thing is that either representatives or senators in the state legislature should be chosen on the basis of qualifications rather than politics, and that there should be close scrutiny of the caliber of aspirants for both of these positions.

That 'Good-Fellowship' Dinner

SUCH an exhibition of uncontrolled temper as was given by Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, at a dinner party in Washington Thursday night, is one of the things that makes it difficult for ordinary citizens to understand why they should be law abiding citizens.

As gathered from news reports, Jones objected to an editorial printed in a Washington newspaper, and, following a good-fellowship dinner at which both were guests, attacked the 30-pounds-lighter publisher of the paper, grabbed him by the shoulders, "shook him severely" and broke his glasses.

The editorial, it is stated, blamed Jones for the rubber shortage, declared that he had tried to place the blame on others and had attempted to shield himself behind President Roosevelt.

Towering to a height of six feet and three inches, this brawny Texan can most likely give a good account of himself in a fistic encounter—but Joe Louis could probably knock him out in a hurry. Surely Mr. Jones must be regarded as having other qualifications for the several responsible governmental positions he holds.

More Turmoil In the Balkans

BULGARIA AND HUNGARY have signed an agreement to protect each other against Rumania. The report has just leaked out from Eastern Europe. The agreement is phrased in this way, although, like other such agreements, its real purpose is probably to cover up a proposed attack by these two powers against Rumania. Hungary evidently thinks so, for it is said in its turn to be making overtures to Croatia and Slovakia.

In short, the Balkan pot is boiling under the German lid. The conquered countries, though all in the same boat, love each other no better than they ever did. The best part of all this is that Germany must spend valuable time and effort to keep the peace. Not only that, but she loses expected help. Eight Hungarian divisions are understood to be posted on the Rumanian border at a time when Hitler could use them to great advantage against Russia. Balkan turmoil, therefore, means German trouble.

Word comes that spinach "grows everywhere in India"—but Popeye may not have told them that it's good to eat.

Why was it always called a "buggy whip" and never a "horse whip"—except when it was used on a man?

More recent developments serve to arouse suspicion that fifty million Frenchmen MIGHT be wrong.

REMEMBER WHAT HAPPENED TO FRANCE

India's Readiness for Self-Rule

APOLOGISTS of British rule in India have not had to look far for arguments to prove that India is not ready for self government.

They have pointed out that India is not a nation in the ordinary sense but a conglomeration of 45 races speaking more than 200 languages (not counting dialects). Religious groups have been antagonistic for centuries. And the Hindus have built up thousands of barriers among themselves by their rigid caste system.

Further, the British have stated, 87% are illiterate, millions in the villages are primitive and have no interest in Indian or international politics.

As if to clinch the argument they have said India has no leaders who can speak for all Indians, and no generals to supervise India's defense.

Two out of every three Indians are Hindus; two out of every nine are Moslems. In addition India has such religious groups as Christians, Sikhs, Jains, Zoroastrians, Jews, primitive tribesmen, Buddhists. The Moslems, largest minority, are scattered in islands throughout the land but the largest concentrations are in the mountainous Northwest and in the steaming Ganges Valley area around Calcutta.

Indians' Answer.

Indian party leaders have been ready with retorts. They point to their many brilliant and highly educated men and women and insist that the only way a country can learn to govern is to govern.

Indisputably, Indians aren't dull-witted. DeWitt Mackenzie, American news analyst, has said: "I spent many months in India . . . and I came away with the conviction that the peoples of Hindustan have a fine mentality, and are capable of unlimited advancement."

Vincent Sheean, another American writer, says of the Congress Party's leader, Jawaharlal Nehru: "There is probably no more enlightened mind in the world today."

If Indians are divided into innumerable factions, Indian nationalists say the British have encouraged the rivalries by using the old divide-and-rule strategy. Britain's primary interest, they say, has been to protect her $4,000,000,000 investment in India, and to keep Indian industries from expanding and competing with English industries.

Further, Indians assert, in the limited chances they have had to govern themselves locally they have turned in good records.

Growth Of India's Aspirations.

Britain has an argument in the claim that her treatment of India has been increasingly liberal. Certainly her colonial management has helped banish famine and pestilence through irrigation projects and modern communications.

For hundreds of years until 1858 India was in the ruthless hands of the British-dominated East India Company whose nabobs "shook the pagoda tree" and made themselves fabulously wealthy at the expense of exploited natives. The Sepoy Rebellion of 1856 forced Queen Victoria to take charge of India in the name of Britain.

This did not head off the national aspirations of Indians. Within 30 years the Indian Congress party was formed which today is the land's greatest single political body.

In World War I Indians, impressed by British promises of greater freedom, joined wholeheartedly in the war, sent 1,215,000 men to fight for the crown.

After the war Indians got some measures of reform but many thought they had been double-crossed. Mahatma Gandhi emerged with his incredible campaign of passive resistance. Every time Ghandi went on a fast the world held its breath. Nehru joined with Gandhi.

By 1935 the Indians had lit such fires under the British that Britain offered India a constitution providing for autonomy in 11 provinces containing three-quarters of the population. The 562 native states did not come under the constitution. Another catch was that British provincial governors held veto power.

'Charter Of Slavery.'

Nehru called the constitution a "charter of slavery," but he and the Congress Party finally concluded it was better than nothing. At the first election 33,000,000 natives turned out. Nationalists of the Congress Party won six of the 11 provinces, by 1939 they had increased the number to eight.

Several American newsmen who watched the Indians as they tried self rule reported that they were doing an excellent job. Others said the Congress form of government was not working too successfully, that the Indians were over-eager, that they lacked administrative experience, and that they ruled cumbersomely. The leaders themselves were dissatisfied because of curbs placed on them by the British.

The experiment ended abruptly when the European war began. Indians found themselves at war without even being consulted. Their provincial governments resigned in protest. When Congress party men spoke out against the war, hundreds, including Nehru, were jailed. Only a few months ago Nehru and most of the others were freed.

Appreciation.

Editor News-Journal:

As president of the Ministerial Association of Richland county, I wish to take this means of expressing my deep appreciation for the most excellent way in which you publicized the union noon-day Holy week services.

What you did, helped much in making this year the outstanding attendance record for the services in many years, and I want to personally express my thanks for what you did.

It would be difficult for our churches to do efficient work were it not for the fine backing which The Mansfield News-Journal has always given to us.

Average Killer.

If you want to know what the average traffic killer looks like, consult the image in the nearest mirror. He looks like you.

A police report on recent fatal accidents declares that the composite death-car driver is distinguished only by his lack of special distinction. He is Any Motorist. More often than not he is sober at the time of the crash, is not speeding, drives a car with good brakes and no major defects, falls within the 18 to 49 age group and drives on a clear, dry road.

What brought the hapless drivers to tragedy? Most of them "took a chance." Not a big chance; just one of the silly things that all drivers do. In this they were still being average. The killer-group's only misfortune was to choose the wrong moment to take a chance. The obvious answer is: Don't be an average chance-taker if you would escape an average killer.—Detroit Free Press.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Jap Hordes Finally Take Bataan, Fortress of Corregidor Still Held

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

WHEN the rains come in tropical Asia, humans take their pigs and chickens into their parlors and wait for the rains to end.

In Burma the rains are due soon after mid-May. They will raise more havoc in southern Burma where it is flat and swampy than they will in northern Burma where there are hills and mountains. One reason for the agitated activity of the Japanese invaders in southern Burma now is that they want to reach the hill country held by the British and Chinese before the rains begin.

In Bataan, the rains are due in only two or three weeks. This may explain why Japan's Lieut. Gen. Yamashita uncorked a torrid, heavy and sustained offensive on Bataan. It would have been difficult indeed to rout Lieut. Gen. Wainwright's U. S.-Filipino outnumbered forces from Bataan during the rainy season.

Day after day the Japanese kept coming through the jungle. Losses on both sides became heavy. On the fifth day Wainwright, faced with dwindling supplies of food and munitions, had to order a general withdrawal to new positions because of Japanese penetrations.

By Thursday the U. S.-Filipino forces had been cut up and hammered so badly that the war department said the forces had probably been overcome in the 20-mile-square chunk of mountainous Bataan to which they had clung for three months. They had held their own against the enemy while Singapore, Java and Rangoon had fallen.

Secretary of War Stimson said Wainwright had 36,853 effective troops on Bataan. He indicated the bulk had been captured or killed.

Americans then were still holding the island fortress of Corregidor three miles off the tip of Bataan, however, and Filipino guerrilla forces were still fighting the Japanese in many of the thousands of Philippine islands.

At Home

Vacant Shelves.

During the first World war there was not a single limitation which completely prohibited the output of any civilian product. By comparison, at the end of four months of this war, the WPB has halted production in five major industries, stopped production in 15 others, and curtailed production in 29. The bicycle industry is among those curtailed, pending rationing. America is fast going all out for war production.

Chairman Donald M. Nelson, in announcing two new orders—a civilian construction stop-order and a ban of the use of steel in hundreds of civilian articles, said these two actions are of equal importance to "the winning of a major battle."

How High for War Profits?

Still galled by reports of huge profits being made by certain war industries, house members hurriedly attached a rider limiting war contract profits to 6% to a multi-million dollar wartime appropriation. Then they went home for Easter.

Administration officials were quick to view the rider with alarm. WPB Chairman Nelson pointed out that any rigid ceiling on profits would force companies to incur actual losses if costs turned out to be more than expected. As an alternative he proposed that the army, navy and maritime commission be given flexible authority to renegotiate contracts on which they suspected excessive profits had been made.

Senators O'Mahoney and Overton produced a bill to meet Nelson's desires. But many other senators clung to the idea of fixed ceilings though they thought the original house measure inadequate. They began thumping for a measure of Senator Thomas (D., Okla.) providing for a sliding scale of ceilings. A 10% profit would be allowed on contracts up to $100,000; and only 2% on amounts above $50,000,000.

After a few more days of arguing the senators decided that Nelson had a good point so they rejected the sliding scale and voted for the plan to give contracting officials discretionary power to re-negotiate.

Assault on the Work Week.

The administration's line was bending.

Such hefties as President Roosevelt, Senate Majority Leader Barkley and WPB Chairman Nelson had lined up to protect labor's 40-hour week. Nelson had pointed out that some war industries were working as many as 55 hours a week already, that repeal of the 40-hour week would raise havoc by bringing a widespread demand from labor for pay raises to make up for the loss in time-and-a-half overtime pay.

But the critics of the 40-hour week kept charging. New Deal Senator Pepper, Lieut. Gen. Knudsen, army production director, gave them support.

By last week-end the administration was reported sounding out labor leaders on the possibility of obtaining a voluntary agreement for a 44- or 48-hour work week at regular pay in war industries, to head off restrictive labor legislation.

It was understood that any agreement would have to satisfy labor that the extra pay it would sacrifice would go back to the government and not into the coffers of war contractors.

Negroes and the War.

Every eleventh adult American is a Negro. Last week American Negroes became increasingly anxious about their role in the war effort when a gun battle broke out at Fort Dix, N. J., in which a white military policeman and two Negro soldiers were killed. Authorities said the battle was "merely a brawl" without racial significance. But Negroes were on edge.

A few days after the gun fight the National Negro congress made public a letter from President Roosevelt in which he assured that group: "There has been considerable progress in opening training and working opportunities for Negroes in war industries. . . . At my direction, the armed services have taken numerous steps to open opportunities for Negroes in the armed forces...."

One of the steps, and a big one, was disclosed by Secretary Knox of the navy. In the past Negroes have been accepted by the navy only as messmen. Knox disclosed that Negro volunteers would be accepted for service as reservists in the navy, marine corps and coast guard.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"There But for the Grace of God, Goes Myself."

It was either Victor Hugo or Alexander Dumas—it does not matter which, for both would have endorsed the thought—that averred:

"I have not ever heard of any crime, that any human being has perpetrated, that I myself, at some time or another, might not have committed."

Hundreds of years earlier, this idea had been anticipated in the words:

"There, but for the grace of God, goes myself."

Who said it?

The evidence seems rather to point, as the author of this expression, to John Bradford, sixteenth century English Protestant martyr, who was burned to death for heresy.

The tradition has it that Bradford coined the classic observation—possibly out of a sense of foreboding—on seeing a condemned criminal on his way from prison to the scaffold.

Abroad

Russian Spring.

The seasons have joined in the war on Hitlerism. That Germans will acknowledge.

Fall weather ended abruptly and early last year to leave the German wehrmacht in the middle of a drive on Moscow it couldn't finish.

Then the Russian winter, notorious for its severity, was the coldest in 140 years. For this we have the word of Adolf Hitler, whose ill-clad warriors froze by the thousands.

Now Russia's spring has gotten in a poke at Hitler by turning out far more sodden than usual. Russians say the spring weather has seriously dampened German hopes for an early spring offensive in Russia. The battlefront is becoming a vast quagmire.

Britain's Raid.

The weather was not Russia's only active ally. British bombers made truly frightful assaults on German and German-occupied industrial areas. After a British raid on Luebeck the Berlin correspondent of a Swiss paper reported the effects were "catastrophic." Several nights later one of the mightiest British air fleets ever to cross the channel — 300 bombers — dropped explosives and fire bombs on war plants in Cologne, Parisian suburbs and other cities.

Meanwhile the Axis started its spring Mediterranean campaign by rocking the British base of Malta with heavy air attacks. The island had its 2,000th air raid alarm.

Vacillating Vichy.

A month ago Vichy was collaborating so closely with Berlin that America got tough and called for a show-down. Since then Vichy has shown increasing favoritism toward America, to the Nazis' annoyance.

During the week Vichy disclosed that she was negotiating sale to the U. S. of sugar from Reunion island in the Indian ocean; and Washington disclosed that the U. S. will resume limited shipments of non-military supplies to French North Africa.

The Paris newspaper Nouveaux Temps (under German control) complained that U. S. pressure had blocked a reapprochement of Marshal Petain and the pro-Fascist Pierre Laval. The paper warned that the Axis would take large slices of the French empire unless Vichy took side with Germany.

But the U. S. also strengthened its ties with the Free French by giving formal recognition to General Charles de Gaulle's control over French Equatorial West Africa and the French Cameroons.

Nippon's Vulnerability.

For all her recent blitzes, Japan doesn't have what it takes to stop a well-armed land offensive, U. S. military officials concluded after a survey. They found Japan is the weakest in tank forces of all major warring powers. She hasn't a single formally organized armored division (the U. S. already has seven) and her tanks are rated low as weapons.

GARDEN CLUB HEARS LOUIS BROMFIELD

Authority on Conservation Tells About "Victory Gardens" at Home of Mrs. John S. Hattery.

THE LOVELY HOME of Mrs. John S. Hattery, 525 Woodhill road, was the scene Friday of the Mansfield Garden club's luncheon and meeting. Mrs. Charles Keating was associate hostess. Guests for the occasion were conservation chairmen of the various garden clubs of the city. Centerpiece for the luncheon table was a very attractive arrangement of pansies and tulips.

Guest speaker was Louis Bromfield, whose subject was "Victory Gardens." Mr. Bromfield placed special emphasis upon conservation. He explained that the purpose of planning "Victory Gardens" is to provide the government with a surplus to feed the country's allies and to aid starving people in European countries after the war. He pointed out that "defense of health is necessary; defense of land is a national duty."

Mr. Bromfield stated that "he who works with land will have a chance to correct the evils perpetrated against it by our careless forefathers." By way of explanation he said that today the nation is facing a grim penalty of fields, soil erosion, dust bowls, top soil washed down stream or blown away due to wasteful farming methods of previous generations of Americans.

The speaker continued, "it is a bitter heritage from those who abuse the land, who rob it and then move on. Each man in his garden, whether his acres be few or many, can adopt intelligent methods of soil cultivation so that waters descend into the earth instead of rolling off it."

"On the small place this may merely require 'cover crops'." Mr. Bromfield explained. "On the larger, strip planting and contour plowing."

In conclusion Mr. Bromfield advised, "whatever land you have, learn to cultivate it with an eye to restoring its capacities for lasting fertility and preventing its destruction by the elements." He suggested that persons interested in having "victory gardens" should read the book, "Ill Fares the Land," by C. McWilliams.

An Arbor day poem was read by Mrs. Wallace Campbell. The club's next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Carville Gorman. Mrs. Bromfield will be associate hostess. Paper to be presented by Mrs. E. J. Gilbert will be entitled "Road of the Naturalist."

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, April 12.

Sunlay's horoscope accents the social, domestic, affectional and cultural activities, with the promise of much joy and gratification in this direction. However this satisfaction might be negated by any measure of excess, over indulgence or impetuosity.

Those whose birthday it is should have the promise of some progress and gain during the year, but such good fortune and satisfaction is jeopardized by an impulse to extravagance, reckless acts and unwise expenditure thus nullifying good prospects through change, travel or legal affairs.

A child born on this day, while versatile and energetic, may be so rash, impulsive, easily led and extravagant that its success is debatable. It may profit if given early restraints.

For Monday, April 13.

Monday's astrological forecast is an interesting and eventful one, with unusual experiences following close on the breaking-up of an old stagnant or crystallized situation. Definite gain may arise from unforeseen sources, calling for change, travel, new associations and interests. This may involve or demand support from the public or community.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a very active and surprising year with sudden and unpredictable benefits arising with the breaking away of old obstructions or antagonisms. The latter may be deepseated, subtle and sinister, from hidden sources.

A child born on this day should have much ingenuity and independence, will court adventure and may shine in an unusual occupation or venture.

Wrap-around turbans get quickly soiled because they require much handling every time they are put on. They should be washed regularly if they are to retain their status as adornments. CHAPTER XX

"May I come in, Colonel Skeffington?"

The Colonel looked up from his paper. Tom Carr was standing in the door. His immense shock of white hair and great beard seemed almost to fill the doorway.

"What's up today, Tom?"

"Nothing special, sir. I'm going away."

"What about your job at the nursery?"

"Well, they've let everybody go out there."

"That's too bad. Madame von Eln would be sorry to know you're leaving the place. She thought a heap of you."

"She was a fine woman. Not many like her."

"Well, Tom. Mighty sorry to see you go. Where are you thinking of going?"

"West."

"I wish you luck. How are you fixed for the trip?"

"All right, Colonel, all right. I saved some money. I got me a covered wagon—looks like a horse trader's outfit—hitched right out there on the south side of the square — but it's fixed up all right."

"I guess you've got about the last of the covered wagons, eh, Tom?"

"Maybe, so far as the wagon itself is concerned, but I take it there's always a steady movement west. It's natural, somehow. Whether it goes on in wagons, or by train, or however. Seems to me you're kind of in line with the will of the Lord when you move west. It's against the grain to go back the other direction."

The Colonel laughed. "Maybe you're right. It's history."

"But that's not what I came here for. I wanted to talk to you about Benny Singer."

"Singer? Oh, yes, that boy Madame took on her place. How'd he make out?"

"All right, Colonel—fine. But he ought to have a job somewhere. I'd like to see him in something before I leave. Now, Benny's a little weak in the head. But he's willing, and good-natured. He's got a regular hand with growing things."

"Well, I guess I could use a boy myself. You know I don't like to hoe in my vegetable garden as much as I used to."

"He could take care of your place fine, Colonel. Mow the grass, and the like."

"Tell him to come in to see me."

"I'll do that, and right away. He's waiting in my wagon down there."

"All right, all right. And—the best of luck to you."

A small crowd had gathered around Tom's "covered wagon." There were hearty exchanges, and a good deal of laughter from the men standing around. Everybody knew Tom Carr, and everybody liked him. But no one overly respected him.

"Fine old fellow. Honest, too. But not much force—no, sir, not much force."

"You got to be hard in this world."

"Yeh. Look at Rodney Green. Started as a hand down there in the clay pit. Now he owns it and lives up on Union street."

"They say his boy's a smart one, too."

"Yeh. Fulmer. He's got a job in the tax collector's office now. Says he's going to run for recorder next fall. Studying law on the side."

"It's better for 'em to get out and scratch like their old folks did."

"You bet. Now look at that McHugh boy. Going to have a pile of money when he's 21. He don't do nothing but burn up the roads in that rubber-tired buggy. Out hellin' around ever' night."

"Yeh, I seen him, too. His folks was high-toned, but he sure comes down—"

Tom Carr drove out Federal street. At this moment he had not a care in the world. With Benny in Colonel Skeffington's employ, he felt that the boy was assured of a certain amount of protection.

A half mile beyond the Macintosh place he met a trim, shiny buggy spinning into town. He recognized Drake McHugh, and held up his arm. Drake pulled up beside the wagon.

"Why, howdy, Mr. Carr. You're going away, I hear."

"Somewhere west." The old man glanced at the good-looking girl sitting beside Drake.

"This is Miss Randy Monaghan, Mr. Carr."

Tom inclined his head politely. "Howdy, Miss Randy. I guess I know your pa."

She smiled. It was a frank, easy smile. "I expect you do. Everybody does. He works on the railroad."

"I'm very pleased to make your acquaintance. Drake, what do you hear from Parris?"

"Well, sir, Mr. Carr, he doesn't write much."

"Getting along all right, is he?"

"Oh, yes."

"Well, when you write to him, give him my best regards. You tell him I sent him my very best."

"I'll do that, Mr. Carr. And good luck to you."

"Thank you. Same to you—both of you."

Drake's restless horse sprang forward at a word. Tom picked up the reins again. "Get up, boys, get on now." The new wagon creaked just a little with its heavy load.

* * *

"Randy, I want to show you something."

"All right. Show ahead."

Drake looked down good-humoredly into the impudent face that returned a half-affectionate, half-jeering grimace. They reached town and Drake took a short cut across some vacant lots north of the public school.

Drake pointed, and the horse started nervously. "You see all that—all this long sweep of hillside?"

"Yes."

"All right. This land—all the way around that bend of the creek, as far as Parris old place—is for sale. Dirt cheap."

"I'm just holding my breath for the big surprise. Have you bought it?"

"'Tain't mine yet. I won't get my money till late this summer. But Peyton Graves and I want to do this together."

"What for?"

"Can you imagine what it would be like to have a big house built up here right where we are, with pretty green lawns back of the house running all the way to the street, and terraces and rock steps leading down the hill to the creek?"

"Yes. It would be windy."

"Shut up. It's not windy all the time. Look at the view. And how private it would be. Nice, great big lots, big enough for croquet grounds and tennis courts. It's the prettiest land around this town."

"It would be nice," she conceded.

"You bet it would."

"Only rich people could build houses like you're talking about, and have grounds like that."

"Well, that's all right. We'll sell 'em to rich people."

"But how many rich people are there in Kings Row?"

"Not so many, but enough, I guess."

"And all of 'em have already got houses, on Union street, or Federal, or even Walnut."

"Aw, quit throwing cold water on this idea."

"Well, I just think you ought to look into it mighty well before you put all your money in it."

"Peyton Graves thinks just like I do about it, and he's in the real estate office downtown where he hears talk about real estate all the time."

"I don't care."

"We wouldn't expect to sell all of it right away. We'd hold it."

"What would pay the interest on your loan while you hold it?" Drake stared.

"I'm supposing," she said, "that you wouldn't pay cash for it, all at once?"

"No." He spoke doubtfully. "No, I guess not. It'd be too much."

"Who does it belong to?"

"Thurston and Macmillan St. George have got a mortgage on it."

"Funny they never thought of developing it. They're right smart about land, and money—those two."

Drake looked sideways at Randy. "Gee, you're smart, aren't you?"

"No. But I hear people talk all the time—mostly kind of poor people, Drake. Once you understand how poor people have to scheme and scrimp and plan to get along you begin to understand something about money. Of course, I'm just a kid—and a girl besides."

"You're doggone smart. That's what I say."

"Well, then, you know what I think would be a good idea?"

"What?"

"You know all that bottom land on the other side of the creek, down below where I live?"

"Oh, yes! I know where you mean—southeast of town, down from the asylum?"

"That's the place. I bet it could be fixed up. Could be cleared and drained. I heard Pa say that—I don't know."

"Well, what in heck could you do with it after you had it, and fixed it up?"

"Drake, there's lots and lots of people who work in Kings Row, people in the tobacco factory, and the stocking mill, and the clay pits and the coal mines, who don't own their own homes."

"Well, gee, kid, they haven't got any money!"

"Not much. But couldn't somebody buy that land down there awful cheap and clean it up and sell little lots pretty cheap? It looks to me like a little profit on a lot of little lots is as good as a bigger profit on just a few big lots."

"Yes. Of course. It does sound like chicken feed, though—a whole lot of nickels and dimes—"

"Make dollars."

"I'll talk to Peyton about it. Course we can't do anything until I have some cash. Peyton thinks he could borrow some, and—"

"But for all that land down below town—I bet you could buy it for a mighty little bit."

"Maybe you're right."

Drake clucked to the horse. "Let's go, honey." They bumped and swayed back to the street.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

JIM WATSON gave me the number for which I had asked, and I called the nearest state troopers' office. Because of information my father had given me, I was able to explain in a code they recognized my authority for what I wanted done. That established, I went on swiftly, while around me the preparations for departure were rapidly going on.

"Do you know the home of Professor Scott Diswell on Thunder Mountain?" I asked.

"Oh, yes; we know just where it is," the captain answered.

"Then you won't have to waste any time getting here," I said. "This call is urgent. Four gangsters in an armored car are on their way here and may arrive any minute. We are taking Professor Diswell and his aid with us to insure their safety, and to prevent his home being wrecked, we have compelled a confederate of theirs we found here to write a note saying he would be back in an hour or two, and to touch nothing until he returns.

"You should be able to catch them off their guard," I went on, "but you will need a strong posse. We wish them captured and held incommunicado until the Chief can contact you. We should also like a guard set over the house until Professor Diswell can safely return. Can you do all this?"

Captain Agrees To Help.

"Did you say four men coming?" the captain asked.

"Yes, heavily armed."

"We'll take care of it," he said laconically. "Is there anything else you wish to tell me?"

"Nothing except to thank you," I answered.

"You're welcome," he returned. "Good-bye."

His receiver clicked upon his last syllable, and when I hung up my own receiver Gus was hovering close to my elbow.

"For God's sake hurry, Missis Graham!" he urged. "Everybody's out of here but you, and I put your note up on the light bulb; see. There ain't nothing for you to do."

"All right, Gus," I answered, with a last quick look around the room. Then gathering up my bag and gloves—I already had retrieved my small silencer pistol and the whistle Gus had given me—I hurried with him out of the house, leaving the door unlocked.

Then, with a sudden thought, I called: "Wait a minute, Gus" and dashed back into the house. I took down the note hanging from the light bulb, which I had compelled the impersonator of Professor Diswell to write, brought it back and tied it to the outside door knob, while Gus fidgeted in an agony of impatience.

"There!" I said, turning away. "They won't break down the door now."

"But they've likely to break you into pieces if you don't get out of here," Gus responded, and for answer I started to run across the uneven lawn. I heard Gus pounding after me, calling, "Look out Missis Graham; you'll twist your ankle!" but I did not slacken my pace. I can run with fair ease and swiftness, so I sent over my shoulder a reassuring "Don't worry, Gus; I can make it," and kept a few feet ahead of him, until we reached the cars.

I noted with approval that the gangster impersonators of Professor Diswell and his man must have been trussed up out of sight in the car of Mr. Branchman, the Warren storekeeper, for they were not to be seen in our own big armored car.

I found Professor Diswell was stretched out upon the rear seat, where his man was ministering to him from one of the turned small seats. The other was opened and ready for me, I deduced, while Gus would share the front seat with Joe, the driver, and Bull.

"You can tell us what to do with these birds as soon as we get to a place where it's safe to stop," said Jim Watson from the other car. "But now, let's get going. We'll lead the way, and turn off into a woods about a mile down, where we can see the road, and yet nobody can see us. There we'll watch awhile, and see what's doing before we go on. Does that suit you?"

JAC Mitt Champions Crowned In Wild Slugging Bees

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

George Allerding, the judge of things fistic in Mansfield and director of things athletic at Ohio State Reformatory, must have an iron nerve, or an easy conscience, or else he is bored with it all and I don't think he is bored with it all.

Thursday night at the high school gym he sat in as judge for 13 JAC amateur tourney boxing bouts, after performing the same function for 12 bouts at O. S. R. in the afternoon.

"How long," I asked him, "will it take you to get to sleep tonight, and after you get there how long will you continue tossing punches?"

"That doesn't bother me any more," he replied, "although it used to after I had been judging pro fights. I think I will pop off to sleep without any great difficulty this evening."

And now here's a thought I would leave with you, sir, Dream punches never bring a sleep producer.

I must admit my own experience is something like George's. Amateur fights never set me swinging in my sleep, but the pros used to do it as regular as clockwork.

Perhaps the difference lies in the fact that there are so many amateur bouts, and they don't last long enough to leave me excited about any one of them.

By the time the pros get through ten rounds of milling, they've left some impression on the brain.

So after the pro fights I would either seek a sedative or give myself up to a night of dream punching. And my manager is still apt to remind me of the days when I would come home from the fights swinging even as I entered the house, and then would go through a great routine of shadow boxing. That was before my shadow became so big it scared me.

And well she might remind me of that former custom, because it ended the night I popped her, but accidentally, on the chin and gave her a very glassy look in the optic.

It wasn't worth the argument I had trying to explain to her that my timing and judgment of distance were just a little bit off. Funny, that didn't soothe her feelings a bit.

This department last night played the role of "The Man Who Came to Dinner"—and then beat it.

The dinner was the Industrial bowling league banquet at the Sons of Herman, and it had all the indications of developing into a very pleasant evening at the time I was forced to leave to attend the fights at the high school.

But the boys knew when I accepted their invitation that I'd have to leave early, so it was all okay with them when I walked out. Even so, I felt just a little bit fly-by-night.

Test Blackout of Stadium Planned

CLEVELAND — (AP) — A test blackout of Cleveland Stadium probably will be made the night of Friday, May 22, when the St. Louis Browns and Cleveland Indians play baseball here.

Herbert Buckman, Stadium commissioner, said yesterday that the plan called for two electricians who are on duty at all times, to pull two switches and throw the Lakeside bowl into complete darkness.

* * *

From the public address system, operated on a separate circuit, fans will be advised what to do. Firemen, policemen, special guards and ushers will be prepared to handle any emergency, Buckman said.

SPORTSMEN ELECT OFFICERS TUESDAY

Charles Mill Sportsmen will elect officers for the coming year at their meeting Tuesday night at 8 o'clock at Orphan Knoll on Charles Mill lake, according to a meeting notice sent out today by Secretary Leo Yuncker.

Refreshments are also included in the program.

Nelson Has Own Secret

Stays 1-Under-Par For 504 Holes In Masters'.

By GAYLE TALBOT

AUGUSTA—(AP)—Byron Nelson, leader of the Masters' golf tournament at the half-way point with two great rounds of 68-67, claims modestly that he "knows something" about the Augusta National course that the other fellows haven't caught on to. He is very mysterious about it.

* * *

"I wish I could tell you what it is," he grinned, "but some of these guys might read it. I'm not joking, though.

"It's a peculiarity of the course that I happened to see right at the start. I've never had a really bad round here. In 504 holes in the Masters' I'm still a stroke under par." He won it in 1937.

Jimmy Thomson, who played around with Nelson yesterday, said he couldn't figure any particular system the Texan employed "except that he puts the ball on the green every time and then knocks it in the hole." Thomson said Nelson's 67 was one of the greatest rounds of golf he ever saw.

The only man who appeared to have a chance of overhauling Nelson was Sammy Byrd, the transformed ball player, whose brace of fine 68's left him a stroke behind the leader's 135.

"Maybe Sammy has discovered something about this layout, too," Nelson conceded.

Byrd, though, scarcely looks like a player capable of outshooting such a champion as Nelson down the final 36-hole stretch today and tomorrow.

Bunched five full strokes behind Nelson at 140 were Paul Runyan, Jimmy Demaret and Horton Smith. Smith and Runyan, who led the field after 18 holes with 67's, each fell off to 73 in yesterday's wind. Demaret smiled ruefully at his brace of 70's.

After this trio there was another wide gap before reaching Jimmy Thomson and Ben Hogan at 143; E. J. (Dutch) Harrison and Willie Goggin 144; Denny Shute and Lawson Little 145; Jim Foulis, Jug McSpaden and Chick Harbert 146, Sam Snead, Jim Ferrier, Bobby Jones, Henry Picard and Craig Wood, 147.

Nelson and Byrd were scheduled to play together.

Moose League Leaders Lose

Roll-Off of Tie Game Saves Governors.

Moose bowling league leaders were bumped around unceremoniously last night at Colony alleys and the one-game margin which Fellowship held over Pilgrims remained intack in the process. Each club dropped a 1-2 decision in league action.

Aided by a 16-pin handicap, Governors tied Prelates in the last game and then won the roll-off to escape a shutout.

* * *

Although dropping two games, Pilgrims got enough wood in their one winning game to take high total of 2724 and high game of 987.

Farrell Hipp took individual honors with a 610 total and high game of 245.

ROOKIES WATCHED.

ST. LOUIS —(AP)— Two rookies likely will be the ball players watched most today as the St. Louis Browns and St. Louis Cardinals open the two-doy city series. Stan Musial, Cardinal left fielder, is a top candidate for "rookie of the year" honors, while Junior Stephens, the Browns' shortstop, has looked efficient throughout the training season.

Takes First Title In JAC Tourney

Victor Labruno of the NYA camp is shown here receiving the first championship belt buckle awarded in the finals of the JAC amateur boxing tournament at the high school gym last night, after copping the 126-pound title. Master of ceremonies Dick Olin makes the presentation.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK—(World Wide) Another war casualty: Spinnakers. . . . Long Island Sound yachtsmen have decided to give up those billowing, hard-to-handle sails for the duration so they can race with smaller crews . . . That isn't quite as silly as it sounds, either, for the navy has been grabbing off experienced sailors as fast as possible, even the guys who used to pilot dinghies around sheltered bays. . . . The Giants have taken up Tom Deegan's "defense service charge" idea and will require the purchase of a 25-cent war stamp along with each free admission this season.

TODAY'S GUEST STAR.

Gene Kessler, Chicago Daily Times: "The Illinois Turf Board will adopt a rule forcing truck drivers to fill out questionnaires before being admitted with shipments of horses to tracks here. . . . This is an effort to stop the practice of importing ringers. . . . Next thing they will insist on horses bringing along photos and birth certificates."

Valdina Orphan's Threat In Derby

LEXINGTON, Ky. —(AP)— The Kentucky Derby has another threat from deep in the heart of Texas.

He is Emerson F. Woodward's big, mud-running colt, Valdina Orphan, which came from behind to beat nine other derby eligibles over six furlongs at Keeneland track yesterday.

The victory was the second by a Valdina Farms derby nominee in two days. Woodward's Hollywood won easily Thursday, also in the mud. His two other derby horses, Rounders and Valdina Alpha, haven't performed yet.

Altogether, 15 derby candidates displayed their wares at Keeneland yesterday in three races and Hal Price Headley's Anticlimax was the only other one to chalk up a triumph.

He was much the best as he defeated an eight-horse field over six furlongs, including the derby candidates Clearmont, War Beam and Sweepstaker. Judson, a derby eligible, ran out of the money in another race.

Valdina Orphan whipped these three-year-olds which finished in this order: More Than Few, Black Raider, Jean Ferrante, Put In, Emolument, Sir War, Radio Joe, Transformer and Patriot. Valdina Orphan's time was 1:14 and Anticlimax's was 1.15 2-5.

Tribe Fans Inspect Rooks

Pin Hopes on Hockett And Fleming For Punch.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — No one looked forward to the first home baseball game of the season as a preview of the world series, but everyone did hope to get his first glance today at two sluggers expected to give the Cleveland Indians some batting punch.

Cleveland also was anxious for its first chance to see King Carl Hubbell of the New York Giants pitch in a local ball park. The Indians picked veteran Al Smith.

Fans have pinned much of their hopes for a successful 1942 season on Les Fleming and Oris Hockett, both up from Nashville of the Southern association. Fleming's booming .414 last year is expected to shrink in the major circuit, but how much it goes down is what interests the locals.

During the training season, the stocky first baseman led the Tribe's hitting. This has been encouraging news for fans, who went to the wailing wall when Hal Trosky retired from baseball because of blinding headaches.

Hockett hit .359 while playing outfield for Nashville. He has taken Gee Walker's place in the lineup. Walker having gone to the Cincinnati Reds. Hockett roams right field, however, while veteran slugger Jeff Heath moved from right to left, Gee's old garden.

Manager Lou Boudreau topped the situation for the fans in naming Smith for the first game here. Lefty Al is expected to lead the Tribe's hurlers this season, since Bob Feller is in the navy.

* * *

Today's game was the 10th in the Indians-Giants barnstorming tour, and has been postponed by weather conditions since last Tuesday.

Muffs Chance In ABC Alley Classic

COLUMBUS —(AP)— A 30-year-old Covington, Ky., truck driver, appearing in his first American Bowling Congress tournament, had the chance of a lifetime—and muffed it.

Starting out with a strike, a spare, and nine more consecutive strikes, Martin Buchmann rolled a 278 in his first game in the singles. In his third game he had a couple of spares and seven straight strikes for a 256.

That kind of shooting in his second game would have put him on top, but . . .

Two misses, two splits and other varieties of hard luck in the middle stanza gave him a poor 150 second game and a 684 total, leaving him out of the select circle.

* * *

Frank Carr of Fort Wayne, Ind., after 30 years of trying rolled a 1927 total for sixth place in the all-events.

Other standings were unchanged Friday.

Sportsmanship Note Tops Off Slugfests

Chet Miller Awarded Prize As Most Popular Fighter In Tourney

IT WAS A WILD NIGHT of slugging the boys put in at Mansfield high school gym last evening as championships were decided in the annual JAC amateur boxing tournament.

They slugged and slammed and banged away, and took and gave their beatings like little men, and then wound up their fisticuffing on a note of pure sportsmanship that sent the customers and the fighters home in a happy frame of mind.

Called into the ring by demand of his backers in a vote for "the most popular fighter in the tournament," young Chet Miller, last fall's quarterback on the Johnny Appleseed football team, declined to accept the prize in a split vote that found him winning by a short handclap over Scott Chapman, NYA camp star.

Miller turned down the prize, a handsome traveling bag donated by Yuncker Sports, because he didn't win the championship in his division, and this act brought forth a unanimous demand by the crowd that he accept the trophy. And Chapman was the first to applaud the decision.

Chapman had proven the outstanding fighter of the tournament without question as he copped the nod in two slugfests with football stars Bob Timmons of Mansfield and Dick Kerin of Mt. Vernon.

The Chapman-Timmons semi-final bout in the 160-pound division was the standout scrap of the night kept blazing away right down to the final bell in spite of the fact that he was continually being speared by the more experienced and sharp-shooting Chapman. Timmons took a terrific beating, but no one could say he couldn't take it.

With three torrid rounds back of him, Chapman took things easy in the first two heats of his final battle with Kerin, then began sharpshooting again in the closing stanza to punch out a decisive verdict. He caught Kerin coming in with a right uppercut flush on the jaw, dropping the Mt. Vernon boy for an eight count, and making the decision easy for the judges.

Most terrific knockout wallop of the evening was uncorked by Walter Beckholt of Mt. Vernon, red haired kid brother of the one-time hard-socking Jarring Jim Beckholt.

Beckholt stopped Wesley Preston of Norwalk in 31 seconds of the third heat of their championship bout in the 135-pound class with a swinging left to the button that sent Preston staggering, rubber-legged, clear across the ring and crumpling in his own corner.

Preston had gone down for eight and nine counts in the first rounds from wild swinging blasts on the head, and then came back in the second to floor Beckholtfor a four count with a right chop to the whiskers.

Jim Alexander, Friendly Hotel 147-pounder, won his weight tie with a knockout over Floyd Morton of Mt. Vernon in 1:49 of the first round. Morton had won in a semi-final bout over southpaw Martin Cook of Sandusky.

Quickest knockout of the night was scored by Wesley Preston in the 135-pound semi-finals when he dropped NYA Camper Glenn Heston in 1:18 of the first round.

Victor Labruno of the NYA camp won the first title placed on the line in the evening's program when he copped the 126-pound crown with a second-round knockout over Owen Ostrander of Loudonville.

Ostrander was on the floor at the bell ending the first round, and went down in the second for counts of 7 and 8 before taking the final toll.

Johnny Banks of Sandusky won the 118-pound championship in a gory battle with Chet Miller, with Miller supplying the gore. His nose started bleeding early in the first round and his face was covered with blood before the bout was over, but Chet was still in there plugging.

Beebe Bennett took another title back to Sandusky, winning the 175-pound championship by outpunching Junior Hauck of Willard.

G. K. Clymer, athletic director of NYA camp, was awarded prizes for having the most contestants, and the most champions in the tournament.

Redlegs Find Hitting Power

But Training Season Shows Mediocre Record.

DAYTON —(AP)— Obscured by a mediocre record of 12 victories in 25 starts, there is promise in the Cincinnati Reds' exhibition-game record that the club may be developing the hitting punch which everyone agrees it sorely needs.

The Reds came here today to meet the Detroit Tigers in their next-to-last practice contest of the season. The finale is at Cincinnati tomorrow. For the third time in four days, weather kept the Redlegs idle yesterday.

A backward look at their spring record shows that the clubs' batting averaged only .258 for the 25 exhibition games. But the eight probable regulars have been hitting at a .284 clip compared to a season mark of .255 by the 1941 mainstays.

Whether the punch will be there during the season opening Tuesday depends mainly on the three players likely to bat fourth, fifth and sixth—Rookie Bert Haas, Outfielder Gerald Walker, and First Baseman Frank McCormick.

Haas played in every practice contest and hammered the horsehide for a fat .380. Walker has .310 in the nine games he's played since the Reds bought him from Cleveland. McCormick's batting slump of last season carried over into the early weeks of spring training, but in the last three weeks he has been hitting one out of three safely.

The rarest big game animal in the United States is doubtless the Woodland Caribou. Only 15 of these now remain, it is believed, and this remnant is now protected in the Red Lake Wildlife Refuge of Minnesota. Once they ranged abundantly along the northern fringe of the United States, and they seemed doomed to extinction, when in 1937 only three could be found.

West coast fishermen are getting rich from a fish that was formerly thrown away, the hitherto despised sea scavenger, the soup-fin shark. It is a freak of nature with an enormous liver, sometimes one fifth of its total weight, and more than half of its liver is oil, with a higher content of Vitamin A than any other fish which can be caught in commercial quantities. Its vitamin potency is 30 times that of cod liver oil, and the world is short on Vitamin A . . . hence the fishermen's bonanza.

the last few days around Bryansk, 220 miles southwest of Moscow, and declared the Nazis were suffering terrific casualties in counterattacks aimed at relieving encircled German garrisons.

Hitler's field headquarters claimed equally heavy losses by Red army troops "in successful German thrusts" on the central (Moscow) front. In the north, around Leningrad, the German high command said strong tank-supported Russian attacks were "frustrated."

On the North African front there was still no indication that German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel was developing his expected major offensive aimed at conquest of Egypt and a drive through the Middle East to Russia's southern flank.

British headquarters said German-Italian activity was minor, with British artillery shelling small Axis columns "attempting to move in the forward area" of the desert battle sector 100 miles west of Tobruk.

Premier Mussolini's high command said tank-supported Italian patrols beat off attacks by British advanced motorized units south of Tmimi.

In the battle of the Atlantic, the German high command asserted that Nazi U-boats had sunk 12 merchant ships totalling 94,000 tons off the American Atlantic coast since April 8.

MAP CAMPAIGN FOR $150,000

Brethren Church Officials Meet at Ashland to Plan Endowment Fund Drive.

ASHLAND—Last week a group of Brethren church financial campaign workers met with Dr. E. G. Mason, president of Ashland College, and A. Glenn Carpenter, business manager, to work out plans and procedures for the coming financial campaign in the church.

They were Dr. L. C. McCartneysmith of Waterloo, Iowa, representative of the Mid-Western district who will head the campaign in Kansas and Nebraska; Rev. W. C. Benshoff also of Waterloo, Iowa, who will conduct the campaign in Iowa and Illinois, as a representative of the Central district, and Rev. E. M. Riddle, who will head the Ohio campaign.

The plan of the campaign is to make a canvass of the membership for an operating reserve of $150,000 to be used as an endowment fund for the college. Under the plans the board of trustees may draw upon this fund in case it becomes necessary during the present crisis.

The campaign is a forward looking one based on the assumption that the war years will make great inroads upon the young man power of the college thus reducing the enrollment and the income. The board of trustees will use this fund for stabilizing of finances.

volving freezing of retail prices as of a certain date and the licensing of wholesalers and retailers.

3. Wage control on the pattern of the Canadian system which froze wages last December. The Canadian system provides for some adjustments of wages to the cost of living, but no other increases.

4. Tightened credit controls designed to put business more nearly on a cash basis.

Henderson's office said the cost of living has increased 13 per cent since outbreak of the European war—a "danger sign" of a serious price spiral—and estimated that uncontrolled inflation would add $100,000,000,000 to the nation's war costs.

With government spending on war contracts, putting more money in the wage earner's pocket and many consumers' goods taken off the market, officials estimate that excess purchasing power now approximates $21,000,000,000 a year.

Drafting of the program follows mounting congressionals demands for more rigid price control and gave rise to speculation that President Roosevelt may send congress a special tax message. The house ways and means committee, now holding hearings on the $7,600,000,000 program, is scheduled to conclude its deliberations April 27.

COUNTY FLOOD THREAT FADES

More Snow Forecast Along With Temperature Drop; Some Cities Hit.

Sandusky rivers in northern Ohio and the Scioto river in the southcentral part of the state overflowed into homes and covered highways today, reaching their highest stages in two years.

At Milan, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Golliver and their son, Walter, were rescued from their flooded home by state highway patrolmen.

Highways in the vicinity of Cambridge and Zanesville were covered by water ranging up to 30 inches deep, the state highway patrol reported. The Ohio river was rising rapidly but it was not expected to reach flood stage.

The flood created a threat to war-rushed steel industries in the Mahoning valley at Youngstown and Warren where the lack of water threatened curtailed operations last fall.

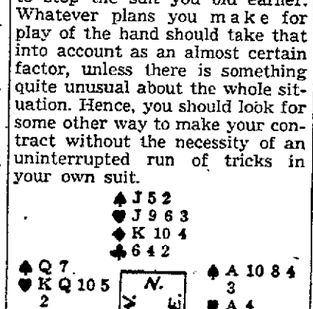
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

HE CAN STOP YOUR SUIT

When the player sitting over you has doubled your No Trump game contract, the betting is heavily in favor of his being able to stop the suit you bid earlier. Whatever plans you make for play of the hand should take that into account as an almost certain factor, unless there is something quite unusual about the whole situation. Hence, you should look for some other way to make your contract without the necessity of an uninterrupted run of tricks in your own suit.



(Dealer: East. East-West vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	2 ♣	2 ♥	Pass
3 ♦	Pass	3 NT	Dbl

It should have been clear to West that the double was made on the thinnest kind of material, since South had enough for an overcall at the level of two. North's action would have been virtually inexcusable unless he had hearts or spades stopped—more likely hearts, as they constituted the suit over which he sat. But West made no such deductions. When he won the third club trick, he tried to run hearts, winning the A in dummy and leading the 4 to the K. The Q disclosed the bad news, when South discarded the spade 9, indicating possession of the K.

West then realized his sole remaining chance was in diamonds, so he led the Q. North covered with the K, and game was no longer possible. If he overtook this with the A, he could not get back to his own hand to finesse the 9 and try to catch North holding the 10. So he let North have the diamond K and heart J, took the switch to a spade with the A and ran three diamonds in dummy, giving him eight tricks, but he had to lose the setter to South's Spade K.

A bit of advance figuring might have saved the day for West. Upon winning the third club, he should have chanced a lead of the diamond Q for a finesse as more likely than a heart split in view of North's double. When later he tried for the heart break and it failed, he would have been in position for a second diamond finesse, which would have worked, giving him his contract.

What is the purpose of laws, in bridge or anywhere else? Are they intended to bring about justice? If not, what? Can you think of any case, real or imagined, in which the correct application of bridge law produces a profit instead of a loss to the party guilty of some infraction? What would you do if you were the sufferer from such an occurence?

DESCRIBES EPIC FIGHT OF MEN TO HOLD BATAAN

Writer Tells How Troops Fought 15 Days and 15 Nights Without Rest.

freedom," announced the end at 7:40 p. m., this evening.

"Bataan has fallen. The Filipino and American troops on this war ravaged, blood-stained peninsula have laid down their arms, with their heads bloody but unbowed."

The foe in this final attack made sure that it would receive no more of the humiliating defeats such as had seen overwhelmingly superior numbers thrown back and had caused the suicide of one commanding general.

The attack was without mercy.

Only two days ago, in pulverizing raids, the Japanese dumped three sticks of bombs in a Bataan field hospital area. They killed or seriously wounded more than 100 patients. It was estimated that in all 47 persons were killed and 67 seriously wounded in the hospital. Many more patients were slightly wounded.

Army men said the hospital was in a clearing in a densely wooded area and it was plainly marked by a large cross a few hundred feet from where the bombs landed.

It was difficult to fix casualties because many patients hobbled into the hills during the panic which the bombing caused, and others were blown to bits.

It seems incredible to me, as I write now, that five miles away from me American army officers are advancing with a white flag to discuss surrender terms with the Japanese generals.

But I know why. The Bataan army crumbled like the one-horse shay.

First, the Americans and Filipinos had fought for 15 long days and nights without a pause, with the dive bombers shrieking down on them in droves and the heavy bombers pulverizing their rear.

Second, the Japanese brought in an abundance of long range artillery which laid down endlessly long and unbelievably terrific barrages.

Third, fresh troops, only recently brought to the Philippines, were thrown against the Americans and Filipinos at key points, with the attack concentrated on the center of the line.

Fourth, tanks were used in mass to dislodge our dug-in forces from their foxholes.

Fifth, malaria and malnutrition put more soldiers out of action than Japanese bullets.

Last night and all day today I watched the arrivals from Bataan, and listened to the stories they brought with them.

They told me of the tragic grandeur of the destruction of the pitifully small last stores of Bataan's ammunition and other supplies during the night, while the men up front fought ceaselessly to hold back the ferocious charges of the enemy.

American army men on Bataan carried out the scorched earth policy to the ultimate, bitter end. The one bright spot on this tragic day is that most of the women nurses were brought here, along with the doctors and male hospital attendants.

To the last, until they were ordered out, the men and the women had remained under fire at the field hospitals, caring for the wounded and the seriously ill, expecting that at any moment the enemy would break through to them.

Lieut. Nurse Inez McDonald, Tupelo, said:

"The last two days have been a nightmare. The Japs bombed us twice. I thought the end had come when bombs exploded in the ward next to mine but I am O. K. and I'm ready for duty."

Not even now is all the story known of heroism and endurance of the men, Filipinos and Americans, who fought so stoutly in jungle fastnesses and along the rugged coast. They stood up without complaint under constant furious fire for more than three months. They were besieged by land, blockaded by sea, cut off from all sources of help in the Philippines and America, and they knew it, but they only fought the harder.

I knew the men out in Bataan, and I knew they were thinking of their people and their country and of freedom and dignity and pride. It was no ordinary fight.

The Americans and Filipinos fought as long as they did only on their courage and fortitude, not on food and ammunition.

The Japanese, in the pride of their power and their triumph, can hardly credit our troops with less than the courage and fortitude of their own best.

The decision had come. The Americans and Filipinos fought for an unshakeable, undefeatable faith, but they were flesh and not steel. In such a fight as this flesh must yield at last, endurance must melt away and the end of the battle must come. Bataan has fallen but its spirit stands, a beacon to liberty loving peoples of the world.

WITH REGARD TO A CARD OF THANKS

Very often a Card of Thanks in The News-Journal meets a need which can hardly be solved in any other way. Not only is it a gracious expression of gratitude to those who have sent floral tributes, but also courteously acknowledges the service and kindness of the many to whom a personal note of thanks cannot well be mailed, or whose names or addresses are not known.

A "Card of Thanks" can now be arranged by telephone: Dial 4251-6, ask for Miss Lane or Miss Stone, either will be glad to render whatever service and advice you need.

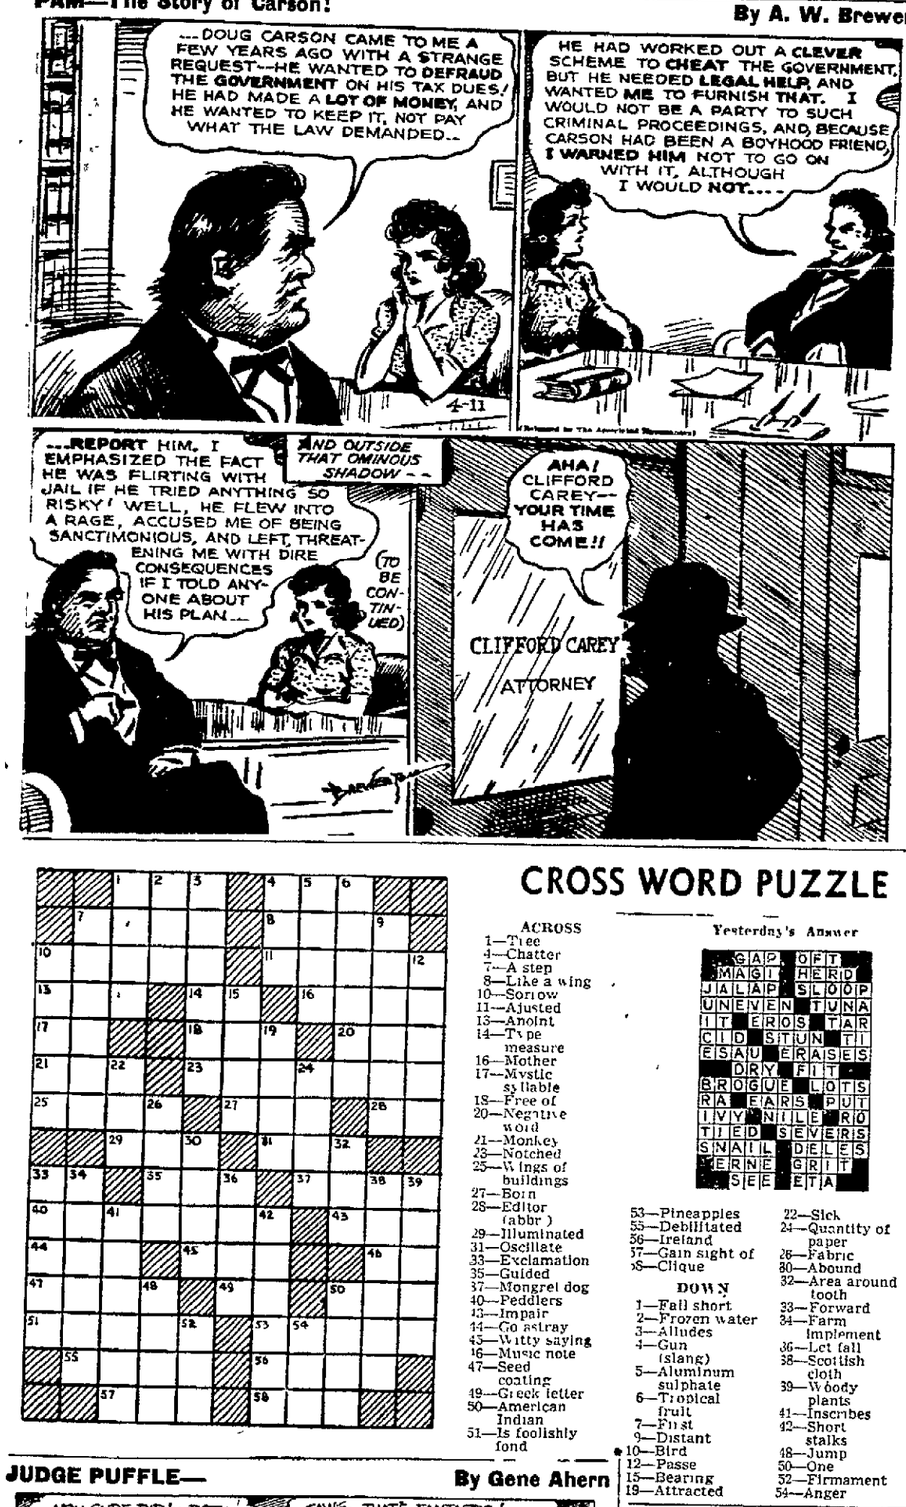
PAM—The Story of Carson! By A. W. Brewerton



—DOUG CARSON CAME TO ME A FEW YEARS AGO WITH A STRANGE REQUEST—HE WANTED TO DEFRAUD THE GOVERNMENT ON HIS TAX DUES! HE HAD MADE A LOT OF MONEY, AND HE WANTED TO KEEP IT, NOT PAY WHAT THE LAW DEMANDED—
HE HAD WORKED OUT A CLEVER SCHEME TO CHEAT THE GOVERNMENT, BUT HE NEEDED LEGAL HELP, AND WANTED ME TO FURNISH THAT. I WOULD NOT BE A PARTY TO SUCH CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS, AND, BECAUSE CARSON HAD BEEN A BOYHOOD FRIEND, I WARNED HIM NOT TO GO ON WITH IT, ALTHOUGH I WOULD NOT....
—REPORT HIM. I EMPHASIZED THE FACT HE WAS FLIRTING WITH JAIL IF HE TRIED ANYTHING SO RISKY! WELL, HE FLEW INTO A RAGE, ACCUSED ME OF BEING SANCTIMONIOUS, AND LEFT, THREATENING ME WITH DIRE CONSEQUENCES IF I TOLD ANYONE ABOUT HIS PLAN....
AND OUTSIDE THAT OMINOUS SHADOW—

FEEBLE RALLY FAILS TO PROP MARKET PRICES

Westinghouse Included In List Of Stocks Hitting Slight Decline.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market settled down at slightly lower levels today after Friday's feeble attempt at a rally.

Scant buying ammunition was found in the news from the far Pacific while speculative and investment hesitancy was further accentuated by the breakdown of British-Indian negotiations.

The list wavered at the start and, while offerings were exceptionally slim throughout, fractional declines were the rule.

Bethlehem Steel dipped to a new low for the year and downward tendencies were exhibited by U. S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Santa Fe, American Telephone, Kennecott, Texas Co., Westinghouse, American Tobacco "B," U. S. Gypsum, Union Carbide and Johns-Manville.

U. S. Rubber, General Electric and Goodyear managed to record minor advances.

Boardrooms derived some comfort from the announcement of American Tobacco's big financing program involving a public offering of $100,000,000 in 20-year 3 per cent debentures. This was seen as an important break in the recent capital jam. The issue would be topped only by the $234,000,000 American Telephone debentures put out almost a year ago.

THEATERS

Ranch Musical.

Bedecked with ten-gallon hats, spurs and chaps the screen's two zany comedians, Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, become entangled with feminine beauty, wild steers and bucking broncbos in their new production "Ride 'Em Cowboy," at the Ohio. The pair is seen as a couple of Long Island hot dog vendors who suddenly find themselves on a dude ranch in Arizona. Anne Gwynne, Dick Foran and Johnny Mack Brown supply the romantic interest and Ella Fitzgerald lets loose some of her famous songs during the musical moments of the picture that also feature the Merry Macs.

Hilarious Comedy.

George Montgomery and Lynne Overman support Ginger Rogers in her new production, "Roxie Hart", showing at the Madison. Both play gentlemen of the Fourth Estate but each has his own outlook on life. When Ginger as "Roxie," a spicy Chicago gal of the "Charleston" dance era gets dragged into a murder case, Montgomery as a wall-eyed cub reporter tries to save her. Overman on the other hand convinces the girl to stand trial if she wants to get some theatrical offers. Adolphe Menjou, Nigel Bruce, Sara Allgood and Spring Byington are in the cast. "Canal Zone," a tense story of the men who fly the air lines between continents, is the second attraction. Chester Morris and Harriet Hilliard are featured.

Comedy Romance.

Greta Garbo plays a fun-loving skiing instructor who turns glamor-girl over night to win her husband away from a blond enchantress in "Two Faced Woman," opening Sunday at the Ritz. Melvyn Douglas enacts the husband and Constance Bennett appears as the "other woman," a successful playwright. Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard are teamed in "Nothing But the Truth," the second picture.

English Drama.

Light comedy and tense drama are combined against an English background in "Suspicion," the Joan Fontaine-Cary Grant starring vehicle showing at the Park. The story deals with a beautiful and sheltered English girl who weds a gay adventurer to get a taste of the outside world and then learns he expects her to supply the funds to do it. Nigel Bruce and Sir Cedric Hardwicke are among the players. The story of a temperamental gangster who goes to Hollywood to film the picture of his life is depicted in "Yokel Boy," the co-feature Eddie Foy, jr., and Joan Davis are in the cast.

Ameche Featured.

"Sing Baby Sing," with Don Ameche, Alice Fay and the Ritz Brothers, is showing at the Majestic. Irene Hervey, Leo Carrillo and Andy Devine appear in "Unseen Enemy," the second attraction.

DRIVER INJURED

Mansfielder Hurt as Auto Crashes Parked Truck.

Dine Vangeloff, 63, of 83 Harker street, suffered a possible skull fracture early today when his automobile crashed into the rear of a truck parked on Bowman street near Chester avenue.

Police said Vangeloff's auto struck the truck with so great force that it was driven ahead more than 30 feet and overturned on the sidewalk. Vangeloff's car then skidded about 40 feet before stopping on the left side of the street. He is in General hospital.

Police said that Cecil Carraway, 52 Armstrong avenue, a driver for the Mansfield Rapid Transit company, had reported that the truck had been parked without lights.

The truck, which is owned by the Commercial Freight Lines company, was parked in front of the home of the driver, Lee Erickson, 543 Bowman street.

DAIRYMEN MEET

Speakers Tell Them Prepare For Worse Times Ahead.

Richland county dairymen were told at their annual dinner meeting last night in the Park Avenue Baptist church to prepare for worse times ahead by strengthening their county and district organizations.

Sixty dairymen attended the session and heard talks by three dairy specialists. Seven directors of the Richland County Dairy Herd Improvement association were elected.

C. F. Christian of Cleveland said dairy prices probably will suffer later this spring when milk output shows a seasonal increase. Conditions point to better times in 1942, however, than last year, but after the war the dairyman may "take a licking," Christian warned.

Other speakers were C. L. Blackman of Ohio State university and A. B. Nystrom of the federal extension dairy division, Washington, D. C.

The dairymen elected five new directors and re-elected two others. Re-elected were Max Drake and D. R. Culler, Monroe township; A. L. Lockhard, Tray township; F. S. Cocanour, Franklin township; O. C. Kline, Madison township; H. R. Darling, Worthington township, and Stanley Huston, Cass township.

TAKEN BY DEATH

Gaylord Schroeder, Bellville, died this morning at General hospital following a brief illness.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schroeder of Bellville; three brothers, Emil of Sandusky, Lloyd of Williamsport, and Daniel of Massillon, and two sisters, Mrs. Clete Moffett of Williamsport and Mrs. Bryan Leedy of Mansfield.

GREAT HEAVENS! THE BOY SLAMMED THE DOOR RIGHT IN MY FACE!! HE ALMOST TOOK MY NOSE OFF, THE BRUTE! WOULDN'T LET ME NEAR THE BABY.
4-7
I'M LOSIN' TIME STANDIN' HERE! RUBY WILL BE DOWN THERE PUTTIN IN HER WORD TO GET THE BABY, HERSELF.
I'LL GIT DOWN TO THE COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE AND ACT WHEN THEY GIVE BETH THE BAD NEWS.
FORGRAVE
IT'S THE ONE WHO ACTS FIRST AS GETS AHEAD OF THE OTHERS AND I DIDN'T LOSE NO TIME GETTIN' HERE
RUBY! RUBY KLOP!! WHAT ARE YOU DOING HERE?
JUST WAITING WHEN THEY'RE THROUGH WITH BETH IN THERE I'M PRESSING MY CLAIM TO ADOPT THE BABY
4-8
WHY-WHY, YOU HATEFUL SPYIN', DOUBLE-CROSSIN' OLD-OLD-OH' I HATE YOU! I'LL GO IN THERE AND PUT A STOP TO THAT THIS MINUTE'
'TWON'T DO YOU A MITE OF GOOD. MY APPLICATION WAS IN WRITING OFFICIAL! YOU FORGOT TO DO THAT. GO ON IN!
FOR THE CARE OF THE HOMELESS
YES, YES, WOMAN! WHAT IS IT? WHY DO YOU COME BURSTING IN HERE?
ITS ABOUT THAT BABY OF BETH'S WASN'T I THE ONE WHO BROUGHT THE CASE TO YOUR ATTENTION?
4-9
YES CERTAINLY! NO DENYING IT'
THEN I'VE GOT FIRST CLAIM ON IT I WANT THAT UNDERSTOOD'
AND THE MINUTE THE BABY IS READY FOR ADOPTION I WANT MY CLAIM RECOGNIZED!
H'M'SO' OF COURSE IF YOU'LL JUST SIT DOWN WE'LL DISCUSS THE SITUATION.
FORGRAVE
PERHAPS, MISS SNOOPLY WHEN YOU REPORTED THE CASE OF MISS WOOD AND THE BABY YOU WERE JUST A BIT OVER-ZEALOUS
OVER ZEALOUS? OF COURSE, I WASN'T! DIDN'T I SAY THERE WAS NO WOMAN IN THEIR HOME TO CARE FOR A BABY?
4-10
NO WOMAN MAYBE, BUT A MIGHTY EFFICIENT YOUNG LADY WE'VE LOOKED INTO HER CASE CAREFULLY.
YES, THAT'S WHAT I WANTED YOU TO DO!
WE HAVE FOUND NO JUST CAUSE TO INTERFERE FURTHER. BETTER CARE COULDN'T BE GIVEN A BABY AND THE STANDARD OF THE HOME IS ALL THAT CAN BE DESIRED THE BABY STAYS WHERE IT IS.
WELL-WELL, I NEVER!
FORGRAVE
IT WAS HORRID OF MISS SNOOPLY TO SAY I WASN'T FIT TO CARE FOR LITTLE JASPER
FOR DEFENSE
BUY UNITED STATES DEFENSE BONDS AND STAMPS
4-11
BUT IT WAS JUST BECAUSE SHE HOPED TO GET HIM FOR HERSELF AND I CAN'T SAY THAT I BLAME HER MUCH FOR THAT
WHAT A LAUGH IT WAS, THOUGH, TO SEE HER FACE WHEN SHE LEARNED I WAS TO KEEP HIM, AFTER ALL. SHE WAS STUNNED.

LITTLE ANNIE ROONEY

YOU'VE SPENT A WEEK INVESTIGATING OLD ORPHAN OLIVER, HIS "RESIDENCE" AND GUESTS — WHICH IS OLIVER'S TERM FOR ORPHANS
COUNTY ORPHANAGE SUPERINTENDENT
— THEN YOU REPORT EVERYTHING IS OKAY — OLD OLIVER IS JUST A KIND-HEARTED CHAP WHO WORKS DAY AND NIGHT FOR SWEET CHARITY'S SAKE
Copr. 1942, King Features Syndicate, Inc., World rights reserved.
— HIS WHOLE SHEBANG IS LEGAL - SANITARY - EFFICIENT AND SELF-SUPPORTING — BAW! I HIRED YOU TO FIND OUT WHAT'S HIS RACKET
BUT I'M GIVING YOU THE FACTS, BOSS —
4-6
DARRELL McCLURE
GEE, IT'S MUDDY — I LIKE SUNSHINE, BUT MR. OLIVER SEZ RAIN IS GOOD FOR THE CROPS — SO I GUESS EVERYTHING IS OKAY
HA, HA — WHEN OUR VEGETABLES GROW UP, ALL OUR LITTLE FARMS WILL LOOK LIKE A BIG VEGETABLE SALAD ON A GREAT, BIG DISH —
IT WOULD BE COMICAL IF INSTEAD OF DIGGING UP ALL THE CROPS, MR. OLIVER HIRED A LOT OF AIR-PLANES FILLED WITH PEPPER, SALT AND VINEGAR, TO FLY OVER THE FARMS —
PEPPER, SALT, VINEGAR? ??
Copr. 1942, King Features Syndicate, Inc., World rights reserved.
YES — THE PLANES COULD SPRINKLE THE PEPPER, SALT AND VINEGAR ALL OVER THE NICE, RIPE VEGETABLES —
THEN THE CUSTOMERS COULD COME HERE AND WE'D SELL 'EM A NICE, FRESH VEGETABLE SALAD — FOR A NICKEL A PLATEFUL —
HA HA HA HA
DARRELL McCLURE
4-7
THE SUPERVISOR SAID TO SPRAY EVERY INCH OF OUR FARMS WITH OUR INSECT SPRAY GUNS
THAT'S TO MAKE SURE WE DESTROY ALL THE BAD LITTLE BUGS
YES, EVEN THOUGH THEY'RE SO TINY YOU CAN'T SEE 'EM, THEY ARE AS DANGEROUS AS TIGERS —
MR. OLIVER SEZ SOLDIERS CARRY GREAT, BIG GUNS FILLED WITH POWDER AN' LEAD — AN' FARMERS CARRY LITTLE GUNS FILLED WITH JUST POWDER
4-8
Copr. 1942 King Features Syndicate, Inc., World rights reserved.
DARRELL McCLURE
BUT THEY ARE BOTH FIGHTIN' THE SAME BATTLE AGAINST DEADLY, DESTRUCTIVE ENEMIES WHO ARE TRYIN' THEIR BEST TO RUIN OUR COUNTRY!
YES, I HIRED A PRIVATE INVESTIGATOR TO CHECK UP ON OLD ORPHAN OLIVER, BUT HE DISCOVERED ABSOLUTELY NOTHING — I FIRED HIM!
COUNTY ORPHANAGE SUPERINTENDENT
4-11
HIRE A SMARTER INVESTIGATOR — OLD OLIVER IS A MIGHTY CLEVER OLD BIRD, BUT SOONER OR LATER HE'LL MAKE A MISTAKE AND I'LL FIND OUT JUST WHAT KIND OF A RACKET HE'S GOT US POLITICIANS DON'T TRUST ANYONE! OLIVER IS GETTIN' TOO POPULAR WITH THE PEOPLE — IT'S MY JOB TO WATCH EVERYONE WHO CONTROLS A LOT OF VOTES
— HA, HA, HA — NOW OUR CROPS ARE PLANTED, AND ALL WE HAVE TO DO IS WATCH 'EM GROW
BUT — IF YOU DON'T PLUCK ALL THE LITTLE WEEDS AS SOON AS THEY START TO GROW, PRETTY SOON YOU WON'T HAVE ANY CROP TO WATCH!
DARRELL McCLURE
I AM DELIGHTED TO OBSERVE THE SPLENDOR OF YOUR CROP — I DOUBT IF ANY PROFESSIONAL FARMER COULD GET BETTER RESULTS
THANK YOU, MR. OLIVER — HANNA AN' I ARE TERRIBLE LUCKY — AN' THE WEATHER IS SO NICE WE'VE BEEN HAVIN' LOTSA FUN ALL THE TIME
I WOULD NOT GIVE LUCK ALL THE CREDIT — A FARMER WHO SPENDS HALF HIS TIME NEGLECTING HIS FARM — NEVER REAPS A BOUNTIFUL HARVEST
IN THE UNIVERSITY OF HARD KNOCKS, THE WORD LUCK IS SPELLED W-O-R-K
DARRELL McCLURE
LOOK, MR. McSAD — THE VICTORY FARMS ARE DOING A-1 PLUS! AND IT IS ALL THE WORK OF OUR LITTLE CHARGES — WE'LL REAP A RECORD-BREAKING CROP
SON, NEVER COUNT YOUR CHICKENS — THERE'S A MILLION THINGS THAT KIN BLIGHT A CROP — WIND AN' WEATHER, HEAT AN' COLD, BUGS, BIRDS AN' BEASTS —
I'VE SEEN TOO MUCH TO BE FOOLED — IF A BURNIN' DROUGHT DON'T COME ALONG — A CLOUDBURST DOES — AN' WASHES EVERYTHING AWAY — THERE'S A MILLION KINDS OF PESTS THAT KIN BLIGHT A CROP IN A DAY —
NOW, YOU TAKE GRASSHOPPERS, FOR INSTANCE —
COME ON, QUICK, ZERO — LISTENIN' TO HIM TALK MAKES ME FEEL LIKE I WAS PASSIN' A HAUNTED HOUSE!
